We are always pleased to acknowledge the many successes of our students, but on this occasion, I am delighted to recognise the success of a staff member. Mr Jamie Simpson, Head Teacher English, received a Pride of Workmanship Award from The Rotary Club of Pennant Hills at a Presentation Evening held at Pennant Hills Golf Club on 12 May 2014. The award provides employers with the opportunity to recognise and acknowledge the efforts and contributions of an employee from a local business or organisation who has a commitment to doing a job well and whose workmanship is of a high standard.

Mr Simpson received the award for his significant and ongoing contributions to school staffing and timetabling at Pennant Hills High School. Part of the citation was that Mr Simpson ‘has had a key role in ensuring the effective provision of teaching and learning activities at Pennant Hills High School. Through his vast experience, insightful knowledge and excellent skills in strategic planning, Jamie has ensured the optimal allocation of teaching staff across the school, at all times focussing on the achievement of the best educational outcomes for students.'

Improving Results through Feedback on Assessment

Year 11 and Year 12 students should by now have received feedback on their performance in recently held examinations. I have spoken with many of them recently and their reactions to results they have obtained differ greatly within each year group. These reactions range from despair at unexpected poor performance to delight at achieving better than expected results.

Research by Black and William in the UK in 1998 shows the feedback given by teachers to their students as one of the key strategies in using assessment for learning. Effective feedback always indicates what a student has done well and what still needs to be done, and provides advice as to how to improve on previous performance.

The important thing for each student now is to use the feedback received from their teachers to ensure there is a structured plan for improvement. Many hours were spent in the MPC during the examination period, and it may require students devoting similar amounts of time to analysing and understanding the feedback given and for a purposeful improvement plan to be developed, in consultation with their class teachers.

I encourage all students across the school to value the written and verbal feedback from teachers and to discuss areas of concern with them.

Great Support from our P&C

We are indeed very fortunate to have such a wonderfully supportive Parents and Citizens Association which provides significant amounts of money to faculties to purchase additional equipment and resources to support the learning of our students. This year, the P&C has provided $33,000 in funding to enable faculties to purchase the following:

- Two interactive whiteboards and a data projector for Science;
- A Thermomix kitchen appliance, two sewing machines, and two ovens for Home Economics;
- Funding of additional teacher time to plan and implement specific programs to support learning, such as the Year 7 Learning to Learn Program, the Year 6-7 Transition to School Program, the operation of the Learning Centre; and Links to Learning initiatives.

I wish to sincerely thank the P&C for their ongoing support of our efforts to provide the best possible education to our students.

Travel Safety

I spoke to all students on our last school assembly about their safety while travelling to and from school each day. Just last week, there were four students hit by motor vehicles near Sydney schools. Recent reports indicate that some drivers are failing to obey the 40 km/h school speed zones in Boundary Road. The P&C is taking the matter up with RMS and we have recently been able to program our new electronic sign on Boundary Road to include a reminder notice about school zones during the hours of 8.00 am – 9.30 am and 2.30 pm – 4.00 pm. We are especially concerned about students who have earphones in, or who talk with friends in groups as they are walking, risking injury due to inattention. I know that I don’t need to impress on anyone just how busy the roads are around our school.

I ask that all parents and caregivers discuss road safety with their child/ren, regardless of their age.

Professional Learning for Staff

Our School Counsellor, Mrs Grunsell, prepared and presented information to staff at a recent staff meeting on Helping Students Manage Anxiety in Performing Classroom Tasks. We were also fortunate to learn more from Valerie Ling, a leading clinical psychologist from the Centre for Effective Living about therapeutic approaches in dealing with students with disabling anxiety. A key message from the presentations was that over time students can learn to move forward in reducing or overcoming anxiety, and can gain confidence to tackle more complex and challenging tasks. (More details are provided later in this edition on page 4 of Jumbunna).

BYOD (Bring Your Own Device)

The BYOD team, led by Mr Minton and Mr Huang, has been carefully considering the best options for the implementation of this program at our school. We have already learnt some valuable lessons.
ENGLISH FACULTY REPORT

The English Faculty has approached the new term with a view to developing our students’ capacity in imaginative writing. To this end, we invited a published author and teacher, Jacqueline Harvey, to our School Development Day. We spent a very profitable three hours developing our skills and understanding. Mr Belling and Miss Crilley have also spent two days involved in a joint schools program on imaginative writing.

Our Year 12 Advanced students attended a Study Day in the Sydney CBD, with a range of academic and professional writers and actors lecturing on their prescribed texts for this year. Being addressed by John Bell on the virtues and complexities of Richard III or Julius Caesar was a rare treat, and even a brush with fame for Alice.

THE TEACHER AS ‘LIFE COACH’ FOR STUDENTS WITH ANXIETY

This presentation was given at the staff meeting on 19 May.

The presenters were Lenore Grunsell, School Counsellor, and Valerie Ling of Valerie Ling and Associates, Westleigh.

Students who have experienced anxiety through childhood may come to high school with poor expectations for themselves, low self-esteem and little confidence. Their parents may hope to control what happens to them at high school, to ensure certainty for both themselves and their children.

Some of the things that may make students anxious are: being seen as ‘different’; doing tasks on their own; being ‘judged’, for example, with marks. Teachers in their day-to-day classroom activities can allay some of these anxieties by:

- Grading activities so students begin with less challenging tasks, such as first reading their prepared talk to a friend, leading up to giving the talk to the class.
- Presenting small tasks frequently, such as giving one-word answers in a quiz.
- Teaching techniques of physical relaxation and breathing, for example in PE and Drama.
- Presenting work in teams, to give social support to more anxious team members.

In cases where students are not meeting these requirements, the school will send a formal notification to parents/caregivers warning of a possible non-satisfactory completion of the course (‘N award’). These warning letters are designed to let students and parents know what has not been achieved and what needs to be done to rectify the situation. Parents and caregivers are required to respond to the school upon receipt of these warning letters. It is important that parents discuss with their child any formal warning letter that is received and to seek assistance from the school if necessary.

from other schools throughout NSW that have taken a range of approaches to students bringing their own learning device to school.

A Charter of Use and the specifications required for devices are now being finalised, along with suggestions as to which devices parents may purchase. This information will soon be made available to parents and caregivers, accompanied by a Frequently Asked Questions document which should provide most of the answers to questions posed by our parent community. We are also extremely mindful of the costs associated with such a program, but feel our students will be disadvantaged should we not take advantage of the benefits for students from them having their own devices to assist their learning.

Meeting the Requirements of the Board of Studies, Teaching and Educational Standards NSW

BOSTES is a new body which incorporates the NSW Board of Studies (BOS) and the NSW Institute of Teachers. BOSTES will continue to determine the requirements for the award of the RoSA and HSC. All students must meet strict criteria in order to be deemed to have satisfactorily completed a course. A student will be considered to have satisfactorily completed a course if the Principal considers there is sufficient evidence that the student has:

1. followed the course developed or endorsed by the Board. (This requires that students attend classes);

2. applied themselves with diligence and sustained effort to the set tasks and experiences provided in the course by the school. (This requires that students work consistently to the best of their ability); and

3. achieved some or all of the course outcomes (This requires that students demonstrate understanding of course work).

In cases where students are not meeting these requirements, the school will send a formal notification to parents/caregivers warning of a possible non-satisfactory completion of the course (‘N award’). These warning letters are designed to let students and parents know what has not been achieved and what needs to be done to rectify the situation. Parents and caregivers are required to respond to the school upon receipt of these warning letters. It is important that parents discuss with their child any formal warning letter that is received and to seek assistance from the school if necessary.
• Presenting activities as fun games, so students focus more on the activity, rather than self-consciousness about their own performance.

• Teaching positive ‘self-talk’ to replace expectations of failure: ‘You can do it!’ ‘Just give it a go – this can be fun!’ ‘It’s more important to try.’ ‘When it’s over you can be pleased with yourself.’ ‘Don’t worry about it. Just be pleased you did it.’ ‘We’re all learning. You’ll do better and better each time.’

• Reframing the task: ‘Tomorrow it will be over.’ ‘Just think of the audience as watermelons.’ ‘Think of it as a muddy field you need to walk through to get home.’

Sometimes students wish to talk about their anxiety, rather than perform the classroom task. Teachers can encourage task performance by rewarding work results with the chance to talk.

Some students avoid confronting work by finding more and more teachers to talk to about their anxiety. These students may need private therapy to deal with their fears.

Some seniors who have experienced anxiety in the classroom have contributed their own ideas: that teachers can help them by reassuring them that they sound fine and look alright; that peers should not be allowed to comment and laugh when a student is giving a presentation; and that peers who dominate and are opinionated, can intimidate their fellow students in a classroom discussion.

Students who are anxious about ‘marks’ will feel reassured by positive comments on their essays. Even with a low mark, a comment such as, 'I really liked the way you expressed these points,' can boost the student’s confidence.

NETBALL NEWS
The Open Netball Knockout team recently had a very convincing 51-14 triumph over Davidson High School, earning them a place in the next round against Tuggerah Lakes. This win was more impressive as we used a number of junior players to compensate for the unavailability of our Year 12 students who were participating in examinations.

PLEASE HELP ME - I’M LOST
If you can provide me with a home, please come and collect me from Student Reception.
I’LL BE WAITING FOR YOU
Hundreds of gorillas die every year due to habitat loss and poaching. Inside every phone is a metal called coltan, which is found in the heart of the great ape territory. These great apes are gorillas, bonobos, chimps and orang-utans.

By recycling your phones, the precious metals can be extracted and reused to make another phone instead of having to dig up more.

The phone recycling company, PhoneCycle, will do one of two things. Mobile phones in working condition will be redistributed to be reused, while phones not suitable for reuse will be broken down for parts which can be recycled. The coltan can be extracted to make new mobile phones without having to further mine coltan.

PhoneCycle will donate the funds raised by phone recycling to the Jane Goodall Institute, where they will be used to support the care of sick and injured animals, the families of the park rangers and research about gorillas and the way they live.

The Pennant Hills High School Environment Team is aiming to collect 100 phones. Please place your used mobile phones (working or not) in the collection box in Student Reception.

Many parents may not realise that there are ratings for mobile phone and tablet apps, similar to movie ratings, which indicate their suitability for children.

Following is a summary of information provided by Robyn Rishani, cyber-safety expert, speaker and educator, who is the founder and creator of Your Kids Online (www.yourkidsonline.com.au).

When an app developer is registering their app with an app store, they must choose the rating themselves, and there are penalties for not adhering to the ratings, so it is in their best interest to comply. When searching for apps, you should find the rating of each app listed under its description. I suggest parents download every app that their kids are using and check out the rating for suitability, and also play with it themselves for at least five minutes. Then, if it’s not suitable, explain to the child why it’s not suitable, rather than just banning it.

Note: Apps like KIK Messenger and Snapchat are rated 17+/High Maturity.
